Objective and Purpose:

To promote cooperation and friendship among the breeders and owners of Brittanys and to encourage higher standards in breeding, training and showing of Brittanys in the field and in the show ring; to discourage the breed from becoming split into groups of "field dogs" and "show dogs" and to strive to keep it forever a "dual dog".

TRAININ' DOGS

with Rick Smith

Is Your Dog Desensitized to Your Commands?

Over the years, we've covered several training topics related to desensitizing your dog, such as introducing the sound of gunfire or fixing the gun-shy dogs. In these cases, we want the dog to consider the sound of the gun to be background noise and not attach any kind of fear or major attention to it. This requires a dog to be more interested in something else (birds, birds, and more birds!) while it gets used to the sound and learns to relate it to the birds and the fun. This is good desensitization training.

There's another kinds of desensitizing that people do that's not so good. In fact it's downright harmful. And the worst part is that we usually don't even realize we've done it. We desensitize our dogs to our commands and cues. This makes both hunting and training harder, because we've created a situation where we now have to do way more than we should to get a response from our dogs.

The numerous ways we teach our dogs to not respond to our cues are, for the most part, linked together. One leads to another, which starts the snowball rolling downhill fast. The problem usually begins with repeating a verbal command. Say we try calling our dog in by saying, "Here!" but nothing happens. So we repeat the command. Still no reaction from the dog. In fact, good old Spot looks our way and then meanders off on his own. Now we turn to shouting at full volume and with some serious frustration (and perhaps a few more colorful words) added to our voice. The neighbors hear you a quarter-mile away, and good old Spot finally decides he'd better quit what he's doing and come to you. Or maybe he decides to go the opposite direction because he doesn't want to deal with an angry person. This happens several times a day and has gotten to be standard practice at the dog's house. And when your dog finally does come to you, it sure doesn't look confident or happy about it, which is a reflection of the anger and frustration it's gotten from its handler.

What just happened? First of all, if the dog finally comes when you get to the third time or more and are yelling, you've taught it to count to three and wait for your loud voice. It knows exactly how many times it can ignore you before it finally has to give in and listen. Your dog also has learned that it only has to come when you shout at it at full volume; it's become desensitized to anything but that routine.

Why did it happen? The best answer is inconsistency on the part of the dog's trainer. When the dog was learning to come, it was taught via handler inconsistency to ignore, or become desensitized to, quiet commands.

How do we fix it? As with training in general, prevention is easier than a cure. To retrain the dog after it has formed a behavior pattern will take many more repetitions than it would have had the dog initially been trained to respond to quiet cues. With any command, say it once in a firm and quiet voice, then enforce it. Do not repeat it while you're enforcing it, as that leads to the whole counting thing again. That's one big reason we rarely use verbal commands in our training; we get the dog to do what we want, develop a pattern of learned behavior, and then give the cue a name after the dog is doing it correctly and consistently. This means spending a lot of time on the checkcord and never verbally asking the dog to come unless you have the checkcord in your hand and can enforce the command. When the dog does come to you, quietly give your verbal command, but say it just one time.

Dogs aren't born speaking English; most of the time, all the talking we do around our dogs is done more for our benefit than theirs. And when the voice is used constantly, it becomes background noise to the dogs, and they learn to ignore it. Again, we've desensitized them to our voice by using a lot of meaningless chatter. Have you ever been around a person who talks nonstop about nothing and you can't get a word in edgewise? Think about not being that person around your dog.

Desensitizing is trained through more forms than just verbal commands, too. The physical cues we give can also be overdone to the point that the dogs disregard the first cue or wait for a Rick Smith has spent a lifetime breeding, training, and handling National Championship bird dogs. His highly popular training seminars teach the "Silent Command System" to dog owners world-wide. During hunting season, Rick can be found on the Mariposa Ranch in south Texas.

Sharon Potter has a strong background in animal behavior, and has been training both horses and dogs for many years, with several National titles to her credit. She is an avid hunter and archer, and in her spare time is working on the first of a series of books on bird dog training with Rick Smith.

This dog is being worked on the checkcord and e-collar, which lets the trainer make a cue or correction but clearly allows the dog to maintain focus on the bird.

command, say it once in a firm and quiet voice, then enforce it. Do not repeat it while you're enforcing it, as that leads to the whole counting thing again. stronger one because they've learned the first won't be enforced. This is usually a result of the cue being increased so gradually that the dog has no reason to respond. Always start soft, but if you need more, get your point across and then go right back down to a soft touch with your cues.

Don't nag, either. It's sort of like the radio in your car: When you're on a long trip by yourself and you've got the radio or CD player on, the tendency is to gradually turn it up a little at a time because it sounds better and covers the road noise. Then you arrive at your destination and shut the engine off without turning the volume back down, and when you get back in and start the engine, the radio is so loud it almost knocks you out of your seat. The volume was turned up so gradually you didn't notice how loud it had become. Similarly, there are going to be times in training when you need to "turn up the volume" – turn it up fast to "loud" then go all the way back down to the softest cue. This teaches the dog to respond to a quiet cue because the loud one is unpleasant and is a correction rather than a normal cue. And you won't desensitize your dog in the process.

When we use physical cues, whether it's with our hands or body language, a lead, the checkcord, a whistle, or an e-collar, we need to start soft. If more is needed to make a correction, don't increase the cue so gradually the dog doesn't notice; instead, turn the "volume" up, and make your point, then go back to a quiet cue.

It's easy to pick out a dog that has been desensitized. They typically do one of two things: act a bit fearful and look at their handler almost constantly, or ignore the handler and do whatever they want. The first comes from being too controlling and heavy-handed; the second comes from not enforcing g commands after one cue.

A soft touch leaves the style in the dog, while a dog that has been dominated will still perform but will lack the confident and classy look of a dog trained with a lighter touch. The light-touch dog is trained, the dominated dog is broke. If we keep our commands to a minimum, we allow the dog to concentrate on doing its job rather than listening to us chatter. Over-handling turns a dog into a robot with no sense of independence, and robots don't find many birds because they're usually afraid to venture far enough from their handler for fear of a correction. A person who is over-controlling is usually a person gets a dog "broke" but not trained. The dog is reacting more out of domination and fear instead of confidence in the lessons learned.

Believe it or not, it's also possible to desensitize a dog to praise. Over-rewarding with effusive praise takes the dog's focus off its job and desensitizes it to a gentle touch, while a light touch or quick pat on the shoulders tells the dog it has done well and also allows the dog to continue doing its job.

The end product of desensitizing is a dog that exhibits boredom, confusion, or fear (and fear includes bolting and running away). Slow down, take your time to teach the dog what you want, and don't be in a hurry to name the commands. When you do name them, be consistent and quiet. Give a command once, and then back it up with a non-verbal correction.

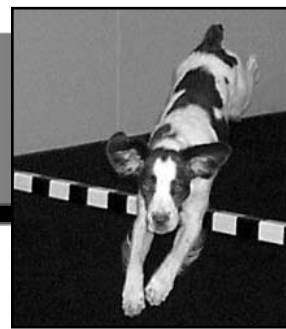

Less is more. Train and handle your dog with that short phrase in mind. Teach your dog to respond to a quiet cue the first time so you don't desensitize it, and you'll spend a lot more time hunting and a lot less time correcting.

*A pat is given as a reward.
The dog acknowledges it without dropping the bird or being otherwise distracted.*

SHOULD I STAY OR SHOULD I GO? Part 1

By Carla Simon

Too often, handlers seem to think in yes and no terms about their dog's skills. For example, "yes my dog stays" OR "no he doesn't stay". Then, when the dog breaks, they think he's just "being bad". It's safer to say that whether the dog stays depends on the situation. In fact, it's generally more productive to evaluate how well and in which conditions your dog stays. Where and when does he perform the stay behaviour with confidence? Where and when is he not confident, displaying stress signals like licking his lips, scratching, sniffing and/or breaking the stay? If you use many approaches and give your Brittany many reasons to stay, then staying can become a rock solid behaviour you can rely on, and a competitive advantage in dogsports.

There are many ways to teach and build the strength of your dogs stay skill, and you can't be sure which will fit your dog best until you try some of them! There isn't just one right way. Think of the stay behavior as a mountain that you want to climb. Your training is probably part way up the mountain already and there are a variety of routes yet to explore. Set your dog up for success by practicing the stay without distractions, then throw in some challenges and your dog will learn to climb the mountain together, step by step.

For example, if you taught your puppy to stay at home in your kitchen without distractions, when you're off leash in the field or at a competition, novel distractions may overcome his level of competence and he won't be sure what to do. Don't fall back on yes/no thinking, but rather, consider the information about strengths and weaknesses of your dog's current stay. What's the longest he will stay? If it's really hot and you leave him in a sit, will he down after a few minutes? Maybe he's great indoors but not confident outdoors?

Once you've mapped out current strengths and weaknesses, then you need to set up a plan where you get your dog to fail indoors and work through it. Through gradually increasing the difficulty, you can strengthen the behaviour to a rock solid stay indoors. And once the behavior is solid indoors, then asking for a stay outdoors is far more likely to succeed, because it's no longer a huge leap in difficulty.

Table Stays

One of my favorite techniques for building the strength of the stay behaviour is stand-stays on top of a table or crate, using touch as the reward. (Naturally, this technique requires that the dog finds touch rewarding. If your dog prefers not to be touched, use another technique instead. For example, some dogs find verbal praise rewarding, or you can deliver high value food rewards to the dog while it remains in the stand-stay position.)

Start by lifting your dog onto a crate or grooming table, or whatever else you have that elevates the dog to approximately the height of your waist. Set up an indoor environment without distractions, in a quiet location without any other dogs. At first, it helps to have the dog's leash attached to his collar. Just let the leash hang and step on the leash so there's no pressure, but if the dog jumps off the table, you will prevent him leaving.

Using long strokes, pet the length of your dog's back with your right hand. (Then your left hand can gently touch the underside of the dog's tail, so the tail moves up into a confident 12 o'clock position. This is not necessary, but definitely adds style to your stand-stay.) You don't need to say anything. Dogs understand body language far better than any words we use. If you do talk, speak calmly and slowly so it doesn't disrupt the relaxation of the stand-stay. If you speak in a high pitched, excited tone, that's exciting and may cause the dog to move.

Done in this fashion, training the stay on the table is a relaxing activity you can enjoy together every night while you watch TV, and both look forward to it. For my criteria, I use no paw movement. This avoids having to reposition the dog into a sit or down, which may introduce challenges of its own.

When the Dog Jumps Off

If your dog jumps off, say nothing. Having your foot on the leash will prevent him from leaving. Simply lift him up and put him back up on the table, and wait until his feet are still to reward with petting. Be persistent. Have a time in mind for the training session (1-2 minutes is good to start with). If your dog jumps off several times, pick him up and put him back every time. Never let your dog choose to be done. Always end on a success, where your dog was standing and staying on the table for at least a few seconds. Over time, this will become easier.

Strengthening the Behaviour

Continue to reward your dog with touch while he stays until the time is up. Gradually increase to 5 minutes. Speed of progression is determined by the dog. Some dogs learn certain skills more quickly than others and rushing without understanding will only hurt your progress.

Next, gradually increase the level of distractions in the environment. This is actually easier to progress, since it gives your dog a job to do. In comparison, if you work up to long durations without distractions, the behaviour will not be as strong and generalized to different situations and environments

Begin each practice session with success. But in the middle of the training session, intentionally challenge your dog in an area of weakness so he breaks the stay. Then show him how to succeed and you've moved a little further up the hill.

Once your dog stays for a few minutes, ask a helper to introduce distractions while you're rewarding the dog with petting while he stays on the table. (But if you need to train alone, just keep on following the same routine but be prepared to lift him back on the table every time your dog jumps off.)

Try adding ONE of the following distractions:

- Shift your weight from 1 foot to the other
- Step away 1 step in any direction, then return to position and reward by petting your dog
- Helper makes an interesting noise. Start with the helper standing far away, and gradually get closer, continuing the same distraction.
- Helper tosses an object that is NOT inherently interesting to the dog e.g. a crinkled piece of paper
- This is visually distracting, but not as distracting as throwing your dog's favorite toy.
- A friendly dog walks in the same room, but far away
- Helper plays with another dog at a distance with no toys or food
- Helper and friendly dog train far away, using food that's not that attractive, e.g. your dog's usual dinner food, after dinner when he's not that hungry
- Helper trains other dog with a food that is attractive and your dog is hungry
- Helper plays far away with a toy that's interesting to your dog
- Helper plays with your dog's favorite toy, far away
- Helper plays with your dog's favorite toy, nearby
- Helper tosses toy far away
- Helper tosses the toy nearby
- Helper offers the dog the toy if it leaves the table to grab it
- Helper tosses toy over the dog's back
- Helper moves object far away e.g. wind up toy moves and makes noises
- Helper moves object nearby
- Helper tosses food far away then nearby

Ending the Training Session

Aim to gradually increase challenges to work up to the end of the list. I recommend only trying 1 or 2 challenges each session. Don't lump these challenges together in marathon sessions the dog starts to dread! Training only 5 minutes a day is plenty of time when you're using significant distractions. Always end with a success, petting the dog while he's standing still. Then lift him off the table onto the ground, and give a verbal release to signal training is over e.g. "all done" or "free dog"

The beauty of this technique is its simplicity. Even in a hotel room, you can generally find a table. And because dogs are naturally hierarchical pack animals, they clearly understand territorial boundaries and treat them as important. So it's very obvious to the dog when he's right (on the table) vs. choosing to jump off the table. (In comparison, if your dog was simply standing on the ground, he might not notice his paw moved slightly when his full attention is following a distraction.)

While training the stay may initially seem very challenging for an active puppy, most puppies take well to stay training on the table. Not only is the table an obvious boundary, but it becomes a cue that you're training the stay. (The dog knows what to expect, and what he has to do to succeed. In comparison, if your dog is standing next to you outside, it isn't obvious whether you're training or going on a walk or loading the car for an outing.) Finally, since your helper can introduce distractions far away, it's easier for you to pay attention to your dog and give timely feedback. While your petting his back calmly, the exercise is significantly easier than if you're several feet away playing with a dog and would take longer for you to notice that he jumped off and to put him back on.

Progressing the Stay

For more experienced dogs, up the intensity of proofing stay by eventually working up to a successful stay with increasing distractions:

Walk in a circle around the dog. (Passing behind him is usually the most difficult time, as he'll tend to move as he watches you). If you need to break it down further, help your dog by staying with him while your helper walks around in a circle behind him.

- Walk away slowly
- Walk away quickly
- Do a jumping jack
- Jog away
- Run away

And finally, leave the dog's sight e.g. going around a corner of a room or building, ideally where you can watch in a mirror, or ask a helper to stay in the room and let you know if the dog jumps off the table.

For dogs that are nervous in their environment, having a stranger in the room may help to increase their confidence more than a quiet empty room. Naturally this requires that the dog isn't afraid of the helper. As always, we try to set the dog up for success. If the dog jumps off, put him back on. Praise and pet gently, slowly, and end on success. If your dog fails several times in a row, you probably made it too hard and need to break down the skill into smaller pieces.

If your dog has successfully navigated all of the challenges listed above, you're well on your way to achieving solid stays under extremely distracting circumstances. But what if this path didn't lead you to the strong stays you'd hoped for? Try another approach that's better suited to your dog's strengths, weaknesses and training considerations.

Diary of a Dog Trainer

Dear Diary,

A gal (I can say “gal” cause I’m old) come up to me at a training clinic and said that she’d read some of what I’d written about the different pointing dog breeds and selecting a puppy, etc; but, she wondered if there weren’t some differences within the breeds that she should consider.

“Like, maybe if I got a liver and white colored Brittany,” she said, “you know, maybe I wouldn’t have all those problems that, like, you’ve had with that orange and white Brittany of yours?” I said, “Well, let me think about it, and I’ll get back to ya.”

Geeze! Like I don’t already have enough problems with my dog, without some gal suggesting that maybe he’s also the wrong color.

Now, I’ll grant that there are differences within the breeds. For example, a so called “shooting dog” will have a greater hunting range than a so called “all age” dog of the same breed. But, these things don’t have anything to do with color or other superficial things, or even the dog’s sex, for that matter. They got to do with something called “breeding.” Let me explain.

You ever hear about that guy, Charlie Darwin? He and a pea farmer named Mendel put their heads together and come up with what is called “genetics.” This is the scientific process by which a smart, hard working dog with a good nose will pass on those traits to her youngsters; unless, of course, she is bred to a stupid, lazy good for nothing dog that couldn’t smell a skunk if it sprayed him in the face. Well, dog breeders have been using this so called science of genetics since way before it was a science.

What happened was that when a bird hunting caveman would go hunting, he would bring with him at least three different “specialty” dogs: one that could find and point game; one that could readily retrieve game; and another one that could provide genial companionship, dogs and cavemen being pretty much social equals. As things would have it, when the caveman returned home from the hunt, he would put these three dogs in his backyard and, sooner than you could shake a club, nature took its course and the genetic miracle known as the versatile hunting mongrel was born.

As years went by, modern hunters all over the world were putting all kinds of dogs in their backyards, and this backyard genetic engineering was working out pretty good. The hunters, not being too far removed from cavemen, were pretty much satisfied with what they got, and they didn’t much care that what they got were mongrels, since the dogs could hunt, retrieve and handle better than anything else on four legs, and they were good companions, to boot.

But, as things always seem to happen, there came a time when some people needed to feel that their mongrels were the equal of the specialty dogs, which some snobbish types had started calling “purebreds” in order to make the hunters and their mongrels feel inferior. The hunters, not being readily inclined to suffer from inferiority complexes, especially since they were armed, decided that they had to assert their equality, if not their downright superiority.

At first, this meant that they had to give their versatile mongrels a distinctive breed identity. It started with the French, they ordinarily being a sensitive type. When a snobby Englishman would say something like, “nice mongrel you got there, Frenchy,” the Frenchman would say, “mais non, dees ees not une mongrel, eetz une Brittany.”

The Germans, not to be outdone by the French, were next with, “Nein, datz unt Drahthaar.” And so on, and so on. This whole process of breeding dogs in the backyard, and then giving them fancy names, explains why we have the many hunting breed varieties.

Once you understand how the breeds of dogs are the product of such genetic engineering, you can appreciate that the question of how a dog will perform in the field is not a matter of its color, but of its breeding; and breeding, not color, is what you should be looking for when you select your dog. Ask the breeder, not what color the dog is, but who the litter’s parents and grandparents are, and what their accomplishments in the field have been.

Importantly, you should check the dog’s parents’ records or pedigrees in available stud registries such as the American Field, Field Dog Stud Book. These registries are dedicated to the improvement of the breeds. A field dog with a prize lineage is a good thing to have in a litter’s pedigree, and it will pretty much assure you of good breeding.

I was going to add a note of caution about “show dogs,” they being bred more for “conformation” than for field utility. I still do believe that such a caution is in order; but, because a German Shorthaired Pointer won Best in Show at Westminster a number of years back, I figured it wouldn’t be wise to tempt the ire some of those there Drahthaar people. Let ‘em bask in the glory of the moment. I tip my hat. What color was that dog, anyway?

TWICE BAKED SWEET POTATOES

4 sweet potatoes (8 to 10 oz. each)
4 strips bacon
3/4 cup sour cream
1/4 cup sun-dried tomatoes packed in oil, drained, patted dry and finely chopped
2 scallions, white and light green parts, chopped
1/2 teaspoon salt
6 ounces shredded Cheddar

American Brittany Club Code of Ethics

Adopted November 30, 1996

The following principles are to be used as an educational guide and a tool for Brittany breeders for the purpose to develop more genetic and disease free dogs, while being ethical in all matters with the public and with our peers.

Objective and Purpose

To promote cooperation and friendship among the breeders and owners of Brittanys and to encourage higher standards in breeding, training and showing of Brittanys in the field and in the show ring; to discourage the breed from becoming split into groups of "field dogs" and "show dogs" and to strive to keep it forever a "dual dog".

Ethical breeders should:

1. Comply with all ABC and AKC rules and regulations.
2. Maintain a high standard of health, care, and cleanliness for dogs under one's care.
3. Truthfully and realistically represent the Brittany being bred and/or sold in terms of quality, health, and genetic history. Refrain from breeding a bitch or using a stud until they are two (2) years old.
4. Consult with your breeder and with knowledgeable, experienced members of the ABC, regional clubs, or local kennel clubs to broaden your understanding and knowledge of the history of the breed BEFORE breeding your Brittany.

5. Breed only stock which are physically and temperamentally sound and in good health. No dog or bitch should be bred that is known to have serious inheritable defects or genetic diseases, such as:

canine hip/elbow dysplasia, primary epilepsy, a seizure disorder, eye disorders - retinal atrophy, undescended testicles, heart defects, extreme shyness, viciousness, other inheritable diseases or defects

6. Not attempt breeding without the ability to distinguish between correct and incorrect physical attributes. This ability requires a careful study of the breed standard, principles of genetics, and a study of both the sire and the dam's pedigrees. Breeders should study and learn the good points within our dogs, looking to both field ability and conformation.

7. Have their breeding stock OFA (Orthopedic Foundation for Animals), GDC (Genetic Disease Control) or PennHip certification numbers for hips on, at least, both the sire and the dam; preferably for three (3) generations on both sides of the pedigree. In addition, other tests (brucellosis, eyes, elbows, and other unspecified tests) should be declared in agreement between owners of the sire and the dam prior to breeding.

8. Refuse to sell to commercial wholesalers, retail brokers, or research laboratories.

9. Have tails docked and dew claws removed soon after birth. Prior to the sale of the puppies, initial shots for known infectious diseases should be given and worming administered. A buyer should be supplied with a four-(4) generation pedigree, registration certificate, information on all veterinary care, and instructions for the care, feeding, and training of the Brittany.

10. Remember your responsibility, as a breeder does not end with the sale of the puppy. A breeder should have contact with the buyer of a pup throughout the life of the dog. This information will enhance breeding knowledge and improve the foundation for a good long-term breeding program. This will also help your regional club to grow with new members and possible participants and workers.

11. Use spay/neuter agreements and/or consider limited registration if it is known or believed to manifest hereditary defects detrimental to the breed. THE LONG TERM INTEREST OF THE BRITTANY SHOULD BE THE GOAL OF EVERY BREEDER.

12. Consider DNA finger printing for all dogs in your breeding programs.

We wish to thank all A.B.C. members who sent their wishes, gifts and visits with Leah since March 2014 when she was diagnosed with kidney failure and had to start home dialysis.

It has been quite a struggle with 3 separate hospital stays since then. We really appreciate all the support we have received including Therapy Dog visits at the hospital, phone calls, visits, emails, texts, Facebook comments and cards.

Our dogs have helped Leah spend many hours at home, and have brought enjoyment by licking her face, getting her out to a few dog shows, and field events since she was not able to return to school full time. Leah, in return, was a great help with socializing our spring litter of puppies. Brittany folks are the best!!

Desert Sunset

The barren birches, beeches, alders and oaks rising out of the fallen snow present a study of gray variations that is enhanced by the late sun's lengthening shadows. The cream and orange dog casts its own moving shades amidst the trees, but his movement does not unsettle the monochromatic symmetry. He emerges into a field where the sun is reflected upon the snow in ice blue slivers and the orange of his coat becomes a blaze of gold refraction.

You have gone afield in mid-December with no expectations of bagging game. The grouse will burrow into the snow and not be easily produced despite your confidence in your dog's nose. You've remained there despite the growing cold of the late afternoon, not because you expect a point around the next bend, but because the dog has no quit in him, and you cannot disappoint him with your own weakness. The dog will ultimately best you, but you are not prepared to concede just yet, although you're impatient for the sun to go down.

Hunting through the snow is wearying as age intrudes upon the vigor of your youth. The dog will keep you young, but for how much longer?

Follow him and find out. Was there a snow covered hill that you wouldn't climb before? The dog will lead you over, and he commands that you follow.

So you do, and you're glad that he will wait for you. That as far as he might range, bounding deer like, as if the snow posed no hindrance, he'll return to check your progress, urging you. "Come on...There are birds here...I'll find them for you...Follow me." And, you do. It doesn't matter whether there are birds to be found, it is his companionship that you have come for, and in that, he will not let you down.

I am in the December of my age. You've probably heard me say that before. But, I've found at least a couple more years that I didn't know that I had in this here dog of mine, and a world of which I had only an inkling. Like the snow that I had only seen as white before, and the barren trees that I had only seen as gray: and, I might be becoming gray myself, except that my dog says, "Not yet you don't," and I follow.

IN MEMORY OF PETE JORDAN

DWIGHT "PETE" JORDAN

Having lived a long, full and fruitful life, Pete Jordan from Gray, Maine passed away on October 23, 2014 at the age of ninety-nine.

It was his goal to live to one hundred but unfortunately he missed it by one year. To everyone who knew him he was first and foremost a gentleman, sportsman and was highly respected for his integrity.

As a young man Pete was engaged in hunting for the market, which was at a time prior to fish and wildlife laws that regulated limits. Using an old Remington pump gun he would harvest sea and black ducks along the coast of Maine. These harvested ducks were then loaded in barrels and shipped by train to market in Boston. Needless to say he became an excellent wing shot. Pete also had worked in the woods, cutting and hauling lumber. For many years he was engaged in the offshore commercial fishing industry working his way up to becoming the captain of a commercial boat. Following his career in the fishing business he built, owned and operated a series of laundromats until he retired from the work force.

His involvement with Brittany began in the early seventies when he and Frank Pride bought littermates that were sired by Walter Young's male. Many grouse and woodcock were harvested with those dogs. After being exposed to Brittanys Pete along with Frank Pride and Harry Lisewski organized and started the Central Maine Brittany club in 1978. Pete began running and breeding dogs under the kennel name "Sebago". He and wife Kate owned the Central Maine Club's first Field Champion "Airman's Ace of Sebago" and also the club's first Dual Champion "Sebago's Nickodemus of Duke". He remained active as a leader in the club from 1978 until about a year ago. Pete served on the ABC's board of directors and during those years did a great job representing the East Coast region. His contributions to the breed and the sport along with his friendship will be sorely missed.

A SPORTSMAN'S RAMBLINGS

by Marty Garrell

The calendar cautions us, but, looking outside at current daytime temperatures in the 60s, we can't help but turn a couple of pages. And with spring/summer on the mind (until the wind starts blowing in from the Atlantic), one has to think about travel. In fact, Janet and I just finished a 2000 mile round trip during my school break to pick up a new horse, but more on that later.

When you travel with a horse trailer, there's no way to avoid mileage costs, and you're very much aware of gas prices ($3.60 to $4.03) across the eastern third of the country. You realize that, despite all the claims of opportunistic politicians, some 28% of per barrel costs (translating to about $0.56 at the pump) are due to speculation, which simply reflects the world we live in. (In fact increased US production [up from 8.1 to 10.3 millions of barrels per day] and lessened US consumption of foreign oil [down from 59% of US consumption to 45%] since 2005 have actually driven per barrel costs downwards!) Nevertheless, when gas is four dollars per gallon, the 10 mpg haul vehicle costs 40 cents per mile for fuel alone, in stark contrast to the average 30 mpg vehicle at 13.3 cents. And $400 per 1000 miles (compared to $133) runs up quite a credit card bill indeed!

Driving long distances has been part of our lives since childhood, and the basics are always the same. If you have lots of miles to cover, you either travel with multiple drivers and switch often or you limit yourself to what is safe. One acquaintance who drives a lot for a living rolled in at our dog training area recently after driving 17 hours non-stop. Not only had he gone down to Tennessee to run dogs in a national championship once, he'd actually done it twice in two weeks, returning home in-between to take care of unavoidable business. He insisted there was nothing to it; his wife did some of the daytime driving, and he drove through the night. Then they dropped off a few pieces of gear, cleaned up, and came to the training area to show us some videos of the competition. No way could I ever have done that! Even Trailways and Greyhound drivers are limited by law to single day drives. They'll take one 500-mile trip but get a long sleep break before turning around for the return.

Maintaining a state of alertness is critical. The monotony of interstate highways can be problematic at the very least, deadly at worst. This is especially true on long, flat stretches, like the ones we encountered last week driving through Ohio and Indiana and western New York. Interestingly we've encountered similar problems driving the Long Island expressway in the wee hours while returning from a long ocean trip out of Montauk or Captree. If wheels touch the "rumble strips" or you note your eyes starting to close, stop and switch drivers or take a nap before moving on!

For all the help one gets from a GPS unit, nothing beats a co-pilot or navigator when it comes to reading road signs amidst clutter or deciding well in advance where to get off the road for food or lodging. One common fault in long distance driving is the tendency to "keep going one or two more hours" in order to "make some miles". The road mesmerizes, so you keep driving, and then, just about the time you really have to get off the road, motels fill up or the desk clerks disappear. Even worse, you drive past the confluence of highways out into the boondocks where there are no more motels at all, not even motels of the "Bates Motel" variety (See Hitchcock's "Psycho".) off the exits! This is particularly critical when you're groggy from pulling a trailer all day and need plenty of help to make those final turns into parking areas. Another advantage of pulling off the road early instead of late is getting a fresh, early start to make up the miles.

If long miles are absolutely critical, nothing beats trimming time off rest stops by packing some sandwiches, particularly for the midday meal. Toasted bagels with spreads and coffee ready-to-go slice time off the front end of the trip. Go easy on the fluids, though, unless you're absolutely certain of rest areas along the way. With states finding excuses to cut essentials, rest area closures are, unfortunately, not uncommon, especially in our fair Empire State! And not everyone carries port-a-pottys in the tack rooms of their trailers.

The most important thing is to arrive at trip's end safely in a coherent state. You certainly want to be rested enough to roll out of the car (or bed) and handle the first trail, the first bird, or the first fish of the day.

EASTERN NEW ENGLAND Crane Wildlife Management Area East Falmouth, MA October 4-5, 2014

After a lapse of a few years, ENEBC ran a trial this fall. In the spirit of keeping things simple, we opted to run a single course walking trial for openers, with plans in the works to expand the format for our future fall trials.

The weather forecast for the weekend wasn't exactly thrilling with rain expected. Luck was with us though, as Saturday was overcast all day long with very occasional drizzle. And we managed to get all dogs run before the skies opened up during the overnight hours. Dawn brought with it clear skies, making for a sunny and breezy Sunday. All in all a good weekend for getting out with the dogs.

Our trial chair was Tania Lewandowski and many thanks are owed to her for the commitment and drive she exhibited to get this trial off the ground. The usual and customary club faithful were in attendance to support and help, including Bud Bearse, Joe Wessling, your reporter, and new member Lisa Tailby. Judges and handlers alike pitched in as well to help where needed.

ENEBC is fortunate to have Bob Roth and company to cater our trials, providing breakfast and lunch for all in attendance. The food is always yummy and so appreciated by everyone. Bob's delightful daughters Casey and Jamie do double duty at the trial. In addition to helping dad with cooking, they have been our official award presenters for several trials now, helping hand out the ribbons to the winners.

Happy Hour was especially celebratory Saturday night as everyone enjoyed the great food and drink and cheered the announcement of the winners for the day. This trial was the first time ENEBC offered the Marge Fitzpatrick Memorial Trophy to the winner of the Walking Hunting Dog. Mostly all in attendance have very fond memories of Marge and the impact she had on this club.

In spite of the low entry, we drew competitors from as far away as Virginia and Florida. Our grateful thanks to all who supported this trial. It is truly appreciated.

Special thanks are due our panel of judges who worked so hard for two days of running. They spent long hours in the saddle paying close attention to the dogs under their judgment and applying careful decision to choosing the winners.

Looking forward to seeing everyone on the Cape in the spring.

Pat Carney

WESTERN MICHIGAN

Ionia Recreation Area

Ionia, MI

August 30-September 1, 2014

Our three-day trial held over Labor Day weekend was a great success! We had a bit of rain, and Sunday was HOT, but by and large the weather cooperated and the people and dogs were great. We had a judge that didn't show up and my sincere appreciation goes to Paul Renius and Bill Klenner for filling in on those two stakes.

We have a new caterer this year and Amy Gregory did a wonderful job with the food. She served a chicken dinner with garlic mashed potatoes, fresh green and yellow beans, Caesar salad, and rolls that was reasonably priced and delicious! Club members Shelley McCandless, Eileen Gust and I made desserts for Saturday night's dinner and everyone seemed to enjoy our efforts. Eileen made her sticky buns for breakfast and everyone enjoyed this favorite.

Thanks go to all the club members who worked so hard to make our trial a success and to the participants for their wonderful support. You can't have a trial without dedicated judges who are willing to sit in the saddle for long hours to judge, we thank each and every one of you! This trial was open to all pointing breeds and we have several Vizslas, GSP's, GWP's and an English Setter. We hope to see everyone back at our spring trial and hope everyone prays for a milder winter!

BISCUIT'S ALL ABOUT ME

LASALLE

Joliet, IL

October 17, 2014

On Saturday, October 18, the LaSalle Brittany Club held our 2014 Fall Field Trial. We had a small entry this year so we ran it all in one day.

This led to some conflicts early, but we were able to overcome those with the assistance of many of the club members. We had a good day to run the trial and after the initial conflicts, everything ran well.

Congratulations to the winners and Thanks to all who participated. A special thanks to all of the committee and club members who helped to complete this trial on Saturday.

NORTHERN OKLAHOMA Lake Murray Trial Grounds Ardmore, OK October 10-12, 2014

Northern Oklahoma had their fall trial on the above grounds the weekend of Oct. 10 thru 12, 2014. There was a good turnout for the Open All Age, Open Gun Dog and Derby. However, there was not enough entries in Puppy and Amateur All Age to run those stakes.

Our weather was trying. It started off hot, mid 70s, Friday and Saturday and topped out in the low 90s. It came a hard rain Saturday afternoon and we all got wet. It was worth it as the temperature moderated for the Derby Sunday morning. Our judges worked hard and their decisions were well received. Gary Young and Dr. Bob Rankin did for the OAA and Derby. Jan and Claude Kilpatrick did the honors for the OGD. I would be remiss if I failed to mention the excellent BBQ chicken supper prepared by my wife, Linda, Friday night and the Chicken enchiladas Trey Baer served Saturday night. I had to let my belt out a notch!

We want to take this opportunity to think the pros that support this trial. Vic Carrington, Ed Tillson, Jim John, and Scott Johnson have obviously been working this summer. Ed's "Tack" dog won the Pheasant Classic, Scott's "Hunter" was runner up in the "Chicken" and "Ned" got part of the "Pheasant". Jim had two placements in the "Chicken" and got first and second in the Open All Age in this trial and also took home the "Blue" in the Derby.

We hope to see everyone back in the Spring.

FORT WORTH Wortham, TX October 17-19, 2014

The Fort Worth Brittany Club held their Fall trial October 17-19, 2014. The trial was held at the Boyd Ranch near Wortham, Texas. A big thank you goes out to our four very fine judges from Texas who joined us to watch over the trial. Ben Kuykendall, Dale Barker, Charlie Collier and Wesley Felt spent their weekend looking at these fine dogs in the five events.

Let's start out with some good stuff. The Amateur Gun was won by a club member, and this was this little dog's first win. Trey Baer won the blue ribbon with Flying O'Rocket Darci. Great Job, Trey, and remember the tradition of first blue you pay for dinner. Trey is from Richland Hills, Texas. Ben Kuykendall, professional dog trainer, club member and judge for our trial, brought some good young dogs. Ben is from Ferris, Texas and handled the winner of the Puppy and Derby events. The winning dog in the Puppy was Blazin Pepper "Hollie" Norwood owned by Phil Norwood of Fort Worth, Texas. The winning dog in the Derby was Highpoint Blazin' Meg owned by Ben Kuykendall.

The Amateur All age was not available to run this weekend, as we did not have the entries to draw. The Open All Age first place was withheld. The Open Gun Dog had trouble finding a broke dog and all the placements were withheld. We had horse and rider problems. After 40 years of doing this field trial game, you come to understand that not so good stuff happens at field trials, but you still have fun.

Our trials are open to all breeds of pointing dogs in all but the Open All Age stake. We appreciate the all-breed owners and handlers who participate in our trials. We would not be able to continue holding trials without their support.

You could not carry out a field trial without the volunteers that came to help. Thank you to Carolyn, Bobbie and Mary for your hard work and goodies to share at the lunches.

We hope to see y'all in the spring of 2015.

IDAHO

Hwy 95, Mile Post 9

Marsing, ID

September 20-21, 2014

This fall we had an unusually hot trial with the temps being in the mid-80s, so it made it hard on the dogs, horses, handlers and not to mention the judges who had to endure the heat all day. Scenting condition were not the best with the heat and the dry grounds. Unfortunately, that famous dog "withheld" showed up in a lot of the placements.

We would like to thank everyone from the judges to the volunteers; without everyone's help we couldn't have the successful trial that we had.

SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY

Spanish Ranch
New Cuyama, CA
October 18-21, 2014

The Southern San Joaquin Valley Brittany Club once again hosted its fall trial and second Annual Spanish Ranch Open All Age Classic at the El Rancho Espanol de Cuyama October 18th through the 21st. The Spanish Ranch is owned and graciously made available by Dan and Pam Doiron for a week's worth of field trials and solitude in the creek bottoms and oak filled canyons of the mountains holding back the Pacific Ocean on California's central coast.

White fences, cattle and irrigated fields greet the participants and are off without a hitch again because of the administrative acumen of Myra-Dawn Ellis, her secretary skills corral and overcome the weaknesses of the easily distracted trial chairman.

The winner of this year's Classic run under the experienced eyes of Leroy Merrell and Bruce Hale was DC Mikey's Spice Girl. Owned by Jerry and Carolyn Cape. Spice ran the canyon forward, gone frequently in the heavy cover of the start only to be found on game or seeking game in likely places as one would expect from an all-age dog. Her finish in the willowed, rocky creek bottom was fast, efficient and with the strength that her run started with. At time, she had to be fetched up by handler Paul Doiron and she set a mark early on no other competitor could overcome.

The runner-up was NAFC FC AFC Spanish Corral's Sundance Kid owned and handled by Joe Gower. Sonny showed a bit more frequently than Spice but handled his birds and backs with impeccable manners and style while showing great stamina and speed with his fluid gait.

Third place was a son of the runner up MTB Zipnson Veni Vidi Vici, call name Vinnie. Owned by Tom White and Margaret Hortsmeyer and handled by Joe Gower. This young dog had an especially nice finish and looked very good on his birds. This placement qualified him for the ABC National Championship where he will join his father and brother in both the open and amateur contests.

Rounding out the placements was DC AFC MTB Scipio's Hot Shot Of Whizki call name Cali, also owned by Tom White and Margaret Hortsmeyer as well as being handled and scouted by the experienced pair. Cali was the only placement of the four on the course coming "in" and she showed far and away the best race of the stake for any dog drawing that direction. Her race was fast, forward and especially impressive in a finish that challenges with a tighter canyon of heavy oaks, cedars and juniper. Cali showed why she was last year's NAFC runner up.

Once again, we offer our thanks to judges Leroy Merrell and Bruce Hale, they had a challenging course, tough, dry conditions and field loaded with two recent National Amateur Field Champions, runner-ups at the national level, Classic winners, and numerous other hour wins and placements. Theirs was not an easy task.

Prior to the Classic, a weekend trial was held with half hour stakes of Open Puppy, Open Derby, Amateur Gun Dog and Open Gun Dog. We would like to thank the following folks for their help in adjudicating these stakes: Wayne Hale, Ed Dixon, Tom White, Ed Mayhew, Kevin Rogers and Joe Rogers. Their time and attention was much appreciated. Lastly, thanks to all competitors, the remainder of the results are listed below:

The future of the GIBC looks bright by evidence of all the youngsters that were present for our fall hunt tests. Saturday evening was topped off with a wonderful meal provided by the club. Approximately 50 club members that worked to make the weekend a success, with special thanks to Mark Holzinger for providing the horses and to Bobbie Sigmund for jumping in to help gun. Also thanks to all the ladies that worked to provide the food.

I would also like to recognize a couple of our newer members: Scott Coffin for help in planting birds and Josh Miller for planting birds and cleaning and filling water barrels.

Part Four Good and Evil

Copper, Lawyer, Pointer, Cook Part Three

Spring comes early to South Carolina. With it comes bream fishing—the best in the world. Some fish with cane pole, cork and worm; some fish with spinner bait, rod and reel; the true devotees fish with fly rod and popping bug. Some fish the brown curving rivers with the Indian names; The Pee Dee, the Congaree, the Catawba, the Edisto, the Saluda, the Savannah, the Pocotaligo, the Ashepoo, the Selkehatchie, the Loosawhatchie, the Waccamaw; some fish the lakes; in the low country and eastern midlands, many fish the bays and the mill ponds.

A Carolina bay is a wonder of nature, a saucer-shaped depression, shallow, deeper to the northwest, sandy bottomed, a collector of rain water, sometimes fed by springs. Some are just a quarter acre; a few cover hundreds of acres. No one knows for sure what formed the bays, perhaps the swirling currents of an ancient sea, perhaps meteors. Many were drained long ago for farmland, but those surviving in their natural state are treasured now, wetland homes to birds local and migratory—songbirds, waterfowl, raptors, wading birds; home to insects; home to water oaks and cypress; home to water lilies and aquatic grasses; home to bream and bass, crappie and catfish; home to reptiles.

The mill pond on the Sutphin farm had been in the Sutphin line four generations, each less prosperous than the one before, back to the first William, the miller and planter whose holdings grew in his lifetime to a thousand acres. His progeny sold off his holdings a few acres at a time, but somehow they kept the mill pond and the acres that fell to Willie's ownership on his father's death. The mill itself had long since fallen down and gone back to humus; not a rusty roof nail survived. But the dam and spillway had been kept up for a hundred years by a fishing club that rented the pond. John Herter's father and grandfather had been members. Willie's father had in 1970 abruptly canceled the club's lease after falling out with the club's president, a timber buyer who, he thought, had cheated him. After that Willie's father sold fishing rights by the day, but not many came, for he was often drunk and abusive when they returned to the boat house at sunset.

The stream that fed the pond lay along a bay, and the pond water extended at its upper end over the bay, so the pond was really a pond and a bay combined. Old growth cypress and water and live oaks dotted and rimmed the forty acres of water, their limbs draped in Spanish moss. Around the cypress knees bream now bedded in profusion. Under the water lilies lurked largemouth bass, waiting in the shade to strike frogs, small bream, water bugs—or lures imitating them.

Willie had looked forward to fishing the pond with his children, as his grandfather and father had fished it with him. But Alma had made it impossible. She'd moved with the children to Arizona and remarried. He hadn't seen the children for months.

He had come to the pond this mid-March Saturday with two things in mind: to catch a mess of bream, and to visit his bank. With the cash he would withdraw he planned to buy a new outboard motor.

He came to the rickety boat house, a remnant of the club days, straight after his night shift and breakfast at Hanna's. The air was calm, and the day promised to be warm, but it was still cool as Willie put his fly rod in the wooden skiff, the only one left from the dozen the old club had supplied for its members. Low and flat-bottomed, fourteen feet long, three feet wide at the center, two feet wide at the square ends, it drew only inches. One windless days like this, it could be maneuvered easily with a short paddle held over the stern.

At eight Willie paddled out of the boat house. The morning mist had evaporated, except for a few pockets to the north, still hiding the trunks of the cypress, their upper branches visible above like imploring fingers.

He cast his popping bug close by the bank where hungry shellcrackers faced land and waited for insects or larvae to fall from the leaves of overhanging bushes. After two false casts, he had the distance. Soon he was getting a strike every half dozen casts; he landed bream the size of his hand, some larger, and put them on ice in a cooler at his feet. His money stash lay at the north end of the mill pond, in the part that was really a bay; he would fish the bank 'til he reached it, then fish down the opposite bank and be back at the boat house by noon. He had a date with the waitress in Florence at three—they would go to a stock car race.

When he neared his makeshift bank, thirty fat bream lay on the ice in the cooler. Pushing the skiff over cypress knees, he reached a gut hidden by the overhanging branches of mulberry bushes. In the gut stood a pole, and atop it a wood duck house embossed with a Duck's Unlimited emblem, its round opening just low enough to reach when he stood in the skiff. He had won a dozen of the houses with a five dollar raffle ticket at a D-U dinner five years before; this was the only one he had bothered to mount.

He was daydreaming about the promise of the coming night when he stood in the skiff to inspect the duck house. He tapped it cautiously with his paddle to make sure no cottonmouth was in residence. Nothing stirred, and so he reached in the hold to make his cash withdrawal.

The pain in the back of his hand was like the stab of a dozen daggers. He screamed and drew back his arm. The duck house came with it. He lost his balance and fell backward. His head struck the gunnel. He saw stars, but did not lose consciousness. Then he was in the water, his hand still inside the duck house, the wasps still attacking his wrist.

Watching from the shadows against the bank was a reptile he had seen but mistaken for a floating log. Attracted by the splashing, it glided out to investigate. The pain in his hand was nothing to the pain in his thigh when the jaws of the alligator closed.

They found his body on Tuesday. The turtles had started on his ears and nose. The duck house floated nearby. Inside it they found thirty thousand dollars, in twenty dollar bills, wrapped in ziplock bags.

Alma asked John Herter to handle the estate for the children. While searching the trailer for valuables, his paralegal found Molly's collar in a cardboard box with the NASCAR driver trading cards. He knew now the person responsible for the disappearance of Molly and her pup. He had learned of Molly's fate earlier, when a fisherman's hook had caught the rope that had held her and the concrete blocks. X-rays from the files of his vet had matched up with her bones from the pond at Boykin. The Internal Revenue Service tried to seize the cash in the duck house. Herter won the tax case for the children, and the cash went to pay off the Land Bank mortgage. Timber from the farm would pay the children's way through college. The farm would stay in the Sutphin line another generation. Alma and her new husband returned to live in Sumter, and Herter's son Jay taught Alma's children to fly fish on the pond and bay where nature had served up retribution.

Molly's pup had been asleep on the porch of the Mill Pond Restaurant when the chef came in early to start the soup of the day. He was not a hunter, did not even recognize the pup as of a hunting breed, but he took the pup with him to the garage apartment he lived in on the estate of a du Pont heiress outside Camden. Her dog trainer recognized that the chef had a well-bred pointer, and when at six month of age he saw it standing quail at the edge of a beanfield, he began to give it lessons on the sly when the chef was at work. In the spring he invited the chef to go with him to a field trial and to bring along the pup, by now a free-roaming favorite of all who lived on the du Pont estate.

The chef had never been to a field trial or ridden a horse, but when the handler told him his pup had been entered in the puppy stake, he borrowed a hose and rode the brace—holding on to the saddle for dear life. Fortunately, the horse was a Tennessee Walker, smooth and gentle. The pup placed first, and the chef became a field-trial devotee. John Herter was at the trial and recognized the pup by its markings, but he said nothing; he had overheard Miss du Pont's handler tell how the pup came into the hands of the chef.

The Bandit

By Bill Buchanan

Claire and I stood beneath a canopy of live oaks and fragrant bay laurels near an outcropping of lichencovered boulders: an island of grey and green in a sea of tawny oat grass. Below us the homes and streets of our community filled a shallow valley, flanked by a thirsty column of oak trees marching south along Salt Creek towards Richardson Bay. The low October sun, streaming under the branches, raised a thin dew on our foreheads. I replaced my gloves and resumed digging in the rocky soil, being careful not to disturb the lifeless form of Maxwell, our four-year old Brittany, which lay nearby.

As a puppy, Maxwell had shown early signs of banditry. Claire regularly found her nylons, shoes, cosmetics bag, underwear, a favorite running hat, chewed up under the coffee table. Given the slightest chance, he would bolt down the street to visit Sally McNally, his Springer girlfriend. An alpha dog, he fought Claire constantly for second ranking in the pack, delighting in slamming his 46 pounds into her with a blind-side tackle when she least expected it. She refused to be intimidated. Using patience and obedience techniques, she forged a truce. Gradually he became an extra layer of security for her during my absences, a walking companion, a shopping buddy. She regularly groomed his thick coat—a patchwork of rich cinnamon alternating with the ivory of his underbelly and legs. A thin flame of white decorated his forehead.

While Claire attended evening classes, Max and I would stroll south along the trace of the Northwestern Pacific Railway, savoring the fragrances of suppertime borne on the night air. Once we were well on the path and away from traffic, I would slip the training collar off, then watch him explode into full gallop and disappear around the bend in a cloud of dust. Two hundred yards from traffic-choked East Blithedale Avenue, Max would U-turn as he'd been trained to do, and rocket past me, faking this way and that to avoid a playful tap on the backside. But the night he disappeared, platinum light from a bloated harvest moon illuminated the meadows. The chilled air was laced with deer musk. He made his U-turn, raced past me, and disappeared up the path. That was the last time I saw him alive.

Four agonizing days passed with no sign of Max, no hint of his whereabouts. The posters we'd distributed in the community and tacked up on telephone poles all the way to Corte Madera had elicited no response. Then one afternoon a woman riding her bicycle along East Blithedale discovered him lying in a shallow ditch. She took the time to call the number etched on his collar: a rare act of kindness in a hurried world. When we located him in a ditch beside the roadway, he was stretched out in the weeds—muzzle cradled between his paws, stone dead—looking for all the world as if he'd merely fallen asleep in an unlikely place. Claire even felt his side for breathing. I wrapped him in a paint-stained drop cloth and carried him to the truck for a final ride through the neighborhood: a strange journey without his ecstatic face reflected in the side view mirror—lips peeling back, inhaling a smorgasbord of fragrances suffused on the slipstream.

The most painful part turned out to be carrying Max's rigid body to the grave we had just dug, laying him down gently, brushing the twigs and leaves from his muzzle, then carefully backfilling the depression with loose soil and rocks. The heavy labor over with, a stillness—heartbreaking and final—suffused the hazy Sunday afternoon. Four days of anxiety, foreboding, memories, a feeling of profound loss, and residual guilt over our failed husbandry of this wild head welled up as convulsive sobbing. We embraced desperately as if to reassure each other that his death was merely a predictable consequence of his banditry. At that moment on the hill, it struck us that Maxwell the Bandit finally had gotten away with the most valuable of possessions—our hearts. And in so doing, had torn a gaping hole in the fabric of our lives.

What About A Name? By David Webb

For several years on weekends I would leave early Sunday morning and travel about an hour and a half to train our Brittanys preparing for the upcoming Fall hunting season. The grounds were a hunting preserve, which usually had birds – chukers, quail, or pheasants – left over from the previous week’s hunts. Permission to train on the Flying Feather grounds was “a given” as the owner was from whom several of our young Brittanys had been obtained.

Our family had had Brittanys as family pets and hunting partners for well over fifteen years before the Flying Feather strain of Brittanys entered the “picture”. This later strain of Brittanys was from dogs having both field trial and show backgrounds.

When it came time to name these new pups there was and are certain guidelines according to American Kennel Club (AKC) and American Field (FDSB) that must be followed. Selecting a name is very important. One often wonders if slang names, such as “Fat Bubba” or “Wearing the Pants” and baby type names, like “Puddles” or “Snoopy” are wise choices.

Each hunting season for several years, I had the chance to watch a super little female Brittany hunt and point chukers and quail. The owners of this orange/white Brit had allowed their son to give her a name “Stinkweed”; call name was Stinker. Just a terrible name to give to a great little pointing dog.

Another name that has often been used is “Beau”. One should consider that there is a command – whoa – that can interchange with this name; thus “Beau” is not a good choice to name a pup. Other names that should be refrained from being used are those that refer to wild animals. Visualize hunting in dense woods for grouse and woodcock and your hunting partner hears you call your dog named “Bear”.

So what is in a good practical name for your new pup? George Bird Evans wrote in his book, “Troubles with Bird Dogs” and the quote is:

“When you set about deciding upon a name for your future gun dog, give it the serious thought it deserves, give it dignity and style, and whether you end up calling him Purdey or Dauntless, Stanch or Wingshot, teach it to your puppy early and use it thoughtfully all his life.”

The last part of Mr. Evans’ quote is important – teach your pup its name. A short name is one that is easily remembered and quickly given. That does not mean that your pup will not understand and respond to a two syllable name.

Pups should be in their new home when they are seven to eight weeks of age. Their ability to learn at this age is phenomenal; their minds are like a sponge. With the assistance of another individual, who holds pup with you having the food dish about 15 feet away. As pup is released call its name. Repeat this exercise each time pup is fed until the pup understands its name.

The Brittany is a great upland bird dog and its name deserves to be a profound name honoring its ancestry, or its history, or a dignified name with style pertaining to the hunting experience. Not just some cute slang name.

MEMBERS OF THE AMERICAN BRITTANY CLUB

Give the gift of a new membership... to give the opportunity to someone to learn about and participate in the American Brittany Club.

This membership campaign is really quite simple, we are asking every member to donate/sponsor a membership in the American Brittany Club. This "gifted" membership might be to a puppy purchaser, or a friend/acquaintance who has a Brittany. All of us encounter people who may just need a little encouragement to become members.

This can work, but it is totally dependent upon your support. Please use the ABC application form in the back of the magazine to enroll a new member today. You may donate/sponsor multiple new memberships. The names of new members & ABC sponsors will be published in the magazine on a quarterly basis.

THIS IS OUR CHANCE TO MAKE A DIFFERENCE!
